$7,000,000 FOR IMPROVEMENTS ON RIO GRANDE

Directors Approve Bond Issue, Large Part of Which Is to Be Used in Betterments.

DOUBLE TRACK FROM DENVER TO SALT LAKE

Reduction of Heavy Grade on Soldier Summit One of First Necessities of Utah Lines.

HE Denver & Rio Grande will be double tracked between Salt Lake City and Denver. This was the substance of Associated Press dispatches received from New York and Denver last night. The budget, as prepared by E. L. Brown, general manager of the road, calls for $7,000,000 for improvements in Utah and Colorado during the present year, about half of this to be spent in each state

The dispatches are as follows: NEW YORK, March 7.-The directors of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad today approved the report of the special committee appointed to investigate the proposed plan of financing.

This action gives authorization for an issue of $25,000,000 7 per cent cumulative adjustment income bonds. $10,000,000 to be offered to stockholders, if the issue is approved by the stockholders at a meeting to be held later. It is planned to use the proseeds for double-tracking the road from Salt Lake City to Denver.

For Double Tracking.

DENVER, March 7 .- Seven millions of dollars will be spent in 1912 on improvements on the Denver & Rio Grande main line in Colorado and I'tah. Half of the amount will be expended in Colorado and the other half in Utah. Most of the sum allotted to Colorado will be expended in this city and Pueblo. Such is the statement today of General Manager Brown, preparing the budget for 1912

The future policy of the road, as stated, is to prepare ahead for periods of heaviest hauling. In Pueblo there will be a rearrangement of the terminal properties. The bulk of the improvements in this state will be for new trackage, substitution of 30 for $5-pound rails, on sidetracks, leading ultimately to a double track from Denver to Salt Lake.

Double tracking on the main line westward from Grand Junction to trait, costing $1,500,600, will begin within a few months.

Means Much to Utah.

J. W. Mulhern, superintendent of the Utah lines of the Denver & Rio Grande, when the dispatches were read to him over the telephone last night, said:

That will mean a great deal for us and for Utah. Some of the double tracking has already been done in Utah, but we need more. There are sixty-six miles to be double tracked between Sult Lake City and Helper, and 171 miles from Helper to Grand Junction.

and 171 miles from kiesper to function.

The road will be double tracked from Midvale to Tucker and from Kynne to Castle Gate, which will give us a solid double track from this city to Helper. The road has a double track between Tucker and Kynne, which takes in the heavy grade of Soldier Summit. The reduction of this grade from a 4 per cent to a 2 per cent will be a big part of the work of improvement to be to a 2 per cent will be a big part of the work of improvement to be done. Of course there will be minor improvements on sidings, slops and other parts of the system, but the cutting of the grade over Soldier Summit and the double tracking will be the big part of it.

When the amendment was reached Senator Root, advocating ratification without material amendment, sought to have the committee's original action set aside by giving precedence to the amendment of the ratification resolution as the final action of the committee, but the suggestion was met by a vigorous protest from all parts of the chamber, and Senator Lodge, who, on behalf of the committee, had presented both the amendment to the treaty and the ratification resolution, declined to take the responsibility of withdrawing the original action, although he said he would vote against it.

Senator Culberson presented an amendment eliminating from the terms of the treaty all questions of honor or independence, as well as all questions affecting the vital interests of this country or of third parties, but it was defeated, 45 to 37. An amendment by Senator Bacon providing for a wider elimination, was at first lost on a tie vote of 41 to 41, but when later the provision was presented in connection with the resolution of ratification it was adopted, 46 to 36.

Chamberlain's Amendment.

After the first action on the Bacon provision, Senator Chamberlain of Oregon presented an amendment to the first article of the treaties, providing that they should not apply to questions affecting the admission of aliens into the United States or the admission of aliens to the educational institutions of the states. This amendment was accepted by an affirmative vote of 40 to 38.

As amended the treaty then was reported from the committee of the whole to the senate and Mr. Lodge offered his resolution of ratification, conforming strictly to the previous action and with drawing as unnecessary the resolution preserving the senatorial prerogatives. It was then that Mr. Bacon renewed his effort to extend the scope of the elimination, which finally was success-

MAY SETTLE STRIKE IN LAWRENCE MILLS

LAWRENCE, Mass., March 7.—Prospects of a settlement of the textile strike appeared brighter tonight in the view of a committee of strikers from the American Woolen company's mills, who returned from a conference with officials of the company in Boston today.

Edward Riley, spokesman of the committee, told the strikers that a better understanding seemed to have been reached mittee, told the strikers that a netter un-derstanding secured to have been reached at their conference. He added that the strikers might have to make a few con-cessions to bring about a settlement. President Wood of the company told the committee that the 5 per cent in-crease in wages offered was a minimum for employees who receive as high as for employees who receive as high as $15 a week. For those receiving the low-est pay the increase will average between 12 and 15 per cent, according to Riley.

This feeling is only equalled by the fear that in the case of the Americans in danger at Velardena, no news is not good news.

SHIPMENT OF ARMS SEIZED BY STEEVER

EL PASO, Texas, March 7,-Shipnents of arms and ammunition to the Vasquista rebels at Juarez, alleged to be n violation of the neutrality laws, were obstructed today by Col. E. Z. Sleever, ommanding the United States troops on duty along the Mexican border.

A consignment of sixty carbines and 19,000 rounds of ammunition, destined to James Smith, whom Colonel Steever, on advices received from operatives of the department of state and justice, characterizes as a "fictitious person," is being held at the United States immigration station pending instructions from the war department.

The shipment detained by Colone Steever is one of three which have been made in two days, and which have ocasioned the greatest concern in Texas. On Tuesday a shipment of 200 rifles and 26,000 rounds of soft-noxed bullets was made. This was manifested and passed by the customs officers, acting, it is said, under instructions from Washiugton. Before the shipment was al lowed to pass. Colonel Steever was informed of the fact by Major Peter Murray, commanding the troops at the Santa Fe bridge. It is understood that Colonel Steever admitted lack of authority, and, as the shipment had been passed by the customs officials, it was allowed to proceed.

The question of the transmission of arms and ammunition has been on the tapis for more than a 'year, it having arisen during the Madero revolution. It is understood that at that time the customs officials here were advised to allow all commodity shipments, whether ammunitions, clothing or foods to pass. This course was pursued and it occasioned considerable dissatisfaction among the people of Texus, especially the residents of El Paso.

Now that Justez is occupied by the Vasquistas, in command of General Antonio Rojas, the question again has arisen and there is much comment concerning the regulations governing transmission of arms and ammunition.

servation of the day before and it does this for the third day, he may safely assume that his position is accurate. A flying snapshot is not as reliable as a continuous series of observations. If he were using a theodolite, undoubtedly the most accurate instrument, there is, no doubt that he could ascertain the position of the pole to one mile.

"If Amundaen left the pole on December 17 he would very likely, with a fair wind behind him, return to his winter waters in about forty-five days.

Shackleton's Experience.

Shackleton's Experience.

"We left our furthest south, which was, roughly speaking, 100 miles north of the pole, on January 9, and reached our winter quarters on February 28.

"They were 550 geographical miles from the pole, approximately the same length of Journey that Amundsen would have to cover from the pole to his winter headquarters, as they were ninety miles further south.

"We may then assume that if Amundsen reached the Bay of Whales at the end of January, he would take two or three days loading up and getting under way with the Fram. He would then presumably go north and work to the westward of Cape Adair and then get into westerly winds and make Hobart, and the Fram, being a slow vessel, doing about five knots, would take quite a month, unless strong winds were behind her, to reach Hobart

Did Scott Reach Pole?

"The question naturally arises in one's mind, did Captain Scott reach the pole before December 14? If so, the honor lies with the British flag, but the same endurance, same skill in the same need of endeavor must be granted to Amundsen as the Norwegian people would grant to Scott if the position was reversed. versed.

"It would be quite possible that the two expeditions having reached Beardmore glacier would be in touch with each other or would come across depots which would indicate the advance or return of either party, and if Captain Scott had left a party at the foot of the glacier they would not be acquainted with Amundsen's movements, as Amundsen would be, had he left a party or a depot in the same position.

"There may have been a more dramatic situation still. Two parties crossing the glacier and converging toward the coveted spot from different directions may have met at the pole itself. Amundsen's equipment, though not so large as Scott's, has peculiar advantages when you consider the nationality of the expedition. 'It would be quite possible that the

Norwegians Use Skiis.

Norwegians Use Skiis.

"The Norwegians, who accompanied Amundsen are accustomed to the driving of dogs and are born ski runners. The broad stretches on the plateau and the level stretches on the barrier surface would be excellent for skiing. The dogs will keep up the rapid pace which the ski runners are able to adopt and this is naturally faster than the slow plodding foot movements of the ponies. Amundsen had twelve dogs at the start, all first-class and well broken in, and their numbers may have been supplemented by births during the long polar nights, so that his team may have been considerably increased before he started on his dash for the pole.

"Captain Scott's party in the Terra Nova, who found Amundsen at the Bay of Whales, described the dogs as being wonderfully trained, stopping or moving on at the sound of a whistle.

"No matter which party has reached the role first, both will have done much to unveil the mystery of the south and to increase the interest and desire for further work in this great unknown continent."

Scott's Wife Doubtful.

The other papers all print stories of Scott reaching the pole basing their reports on the telegram sont by the Daily Express correspondent at Wellington, N. Z., to the effect that Amundsen had told him of the success of his British rival.

Mrs. Scott, wife of the British explorer, expressed the following views:

"I have received no news from Captain Scott. The telegram from Wellington does not purport to come direct from Amundsen, even if he could have obtained it. At any rate it is not advisable to regard it as a fact until further and more reliable information reaches us."

but it was pointed out that Amundsel intended to make a dash for the pole and not carry out such an extensive pro-gramme of scientific work as that which Scott's expedition proposed.

Might Have Met.

Sir Ernest Shackleton said:
"If Amundsen has brought news of Scott's success, he might have obtained it in any one of these ways: He might have met Scott on Beardmore glacier, which was the route taken by me, through the mountains of the Antarctic continent. It was generally understood that both explorers made for this point, approaching it by different routes. They would have followed the same route on the return trip. The glacier begins 250 miles from the furthest point south, 350 miles from the furthest point south, 350 miles from the pole. It is now the only known means of access to the vast plateau encompassing the pole. Or Amundsen may have touched Cape Adair on the homeward journey and there gained news of Scott, who may have sent a detached party to Cape Adair for purposes of scientific observation. entific observation.

"There is only one man by whom such information could have reached Welling "There is only one man by whom such information could have reached Wellington. Amundsen's ship on her return may have passed through Cook's straits, on which Wellington sands, and may have been signaled by some ruse from one ship to an observer on shore, but as the Frammust have passed Cook's straits this week, it is puzzling that we did not hear of the discovery earlier."

Shackleton was more suspicious of the success of Scott in an interview in the Post, in which he said:

"The report itself seems very suspicious to me. As far as I know, there is no cable direct from Hobart to Wellington. I fail to understand why Amundsen should have cabled via Sydney to Wellington, instead of cabling direct here or to Norway. It is, of course, possible that Amundsen returned by the straits and when he neared Wellington gave a prearranged signal, but that must be regarded as a far-fetched theory.

"So much for the report. As regards the news itself, it is to my mind most unlikely that Captain Scott would have authorized Amundsen to give away his news."

Message to King.

Message to King.

A dispatch to the Morning Post from Christiana states that the first telegram from Captain Amundsen arrived there this morning and was addressed to the king. The newspapers there expressed confidence that Amundsen has reached his goal and explored the interior of the unknown continent.

The general impression obtaining among scientific authorities here is that Captain Amundsen, even if he has not actually reached the pole has accomplished a magnificent performance. His brother, Leon Amundsen, states that it is the explorer's intention before starting on an expedition to the north polar waters to make a lecturing four in Australia and Europe. In any event, the Fram, after undergoing necessary repairs, is proceeding to San Francisco, where Amundsen will meet her in 1913. It is expected that Amundsen will publish his detailed report in the near future.

the Antarctic regions, dispatches reaching here on the subject are conflicting.
Captain Amundsen has arrived at Hobart, Tasmania, on the steamer Fram, achievement and reiterated her hope that the news was true.

Nor did Lieutenant Evans, the London secretary of the Scott expedition, receive any direct word of Captain Scott's reported success and he assumed that he would be among the first notified, probably by a message from Captain Scott himself through the agency of Captain Amundsen, if it had happened that the
